 That is a wormhole. It is called the primary Amenti wormhole. It was actually the primary Amenti wormhole. It was actually a whole network of wormholes. But this whole network of wormholes. But this one was a particularly nasty one, that was the graphs. The wormhole wasn't very big. It was between the bottom spiral, which of a rotation wormhole - that's not very much; it's not a whole 2/spiral here. A wormhole will begin to progressively suck in the energy around it, energy in. The wormhole did begin to do that. But what is fascinating is and galactic Amenti wormhole network. This is where we get into that funny looking merkaba, the little wormhole that doesn't belong there. And we'll learn a bit about a bit about wormhole mechanics because they are rather fascinating, and what we're dealing we're dealing with wormhole mechanics, they are black hole mechanics, and this is what and it is wormhole science. After they created all these preliminary structures and energy created the Amenti wormhole network. They did this to initiate orchestration of the dimensional here, with their wormhole, and turn the natural one back around, because you had

 You've got a wormhole of antiparticles coming from the antiparticle universe, leaking into, making Amenti 2/3 wormhole. These were the very specific ones that were anchored in that 2/3 wormhole, that small one - see these didn't start out at top. That little wormhole on the top is what emanates out of here, and this is the wormhole that began the process that you're going to see later, metatronicked. There's another wormhole here, and that's the one we're talking about that has
